MR. JOHN A. WALSH A GAIN .- Mr. John A Walsh has been interviewed in Baltimore and again ventilated his views at length concerning the prosecution of the star route cases in general and Mr. Bliss' part in the prosecution in particular. He intimates in the interview that Mr. Bliss so conducted the first proceedings against ex-Senator Kellogg before the grand jury as to save Kellogg from indictment and sacrince Brady. The influ-ences that saved Kellogg on that occasion, Mr. Walsh said, was the influence of the administration exercised in many insidious ways through its friends, together with the lukewarmness of the Department of Justice. He further said that Bliss and Kellogg met at Mr. Chandler's house to discuss the methods to be adopted.

CHRISTMAS AT THE ALMSHOUSE. The Poor Children's Christmas Enter-How the Day was Spent by the Wards of the City.

A CHRISTMAS TREE FOR THE CHILDREN-A LITTLE ONE WHO WANTED TO HANG UP HIS STOCKING-PRESENTS FOR THE GROWN CHILDREN-A THOUGHT-

"I wisth I tood doe out there," lisped a little blue eyed girl of three or four years, as she climbed up to the window sill at the District almshouse yesterday and looked out at the broad sheet of Christmas snow. "I wish I tood doe out in the snow," and she turned her large blue eyes up into THE STAR reporter's face and put her little hand confidently upon his knee. The reporter had gone to see how Christmas looked from within the white washed walls of an almshouse, and was seated in the office waiting for Superintendent Stoutenberg. A CHRISTMAS TREE, already despoiled of its treasures, and barren, except for bits of fancy paper and glass ornaments, which had escaped the onset of the children the night before, stood upon the table and proclaimed that Christmas had not forgotten to look in upon the little ones even there. The child's eyes wandered from the snow outside to the tree within and her little face brightened up with a smile as she said, "we hadh a tresmas tree lasth night." she prattled on in her childlish way about the snow, the tree and Christmas until Mr. Stoutenberg ar-rived. "Yes," said that gentleman, as he conducted the reporter through the wards, "they celebrate Christmas, and probably enjoy it, in their way, as much as anyone does. But you are too late for dinner; you should see them at their

and some little toy. We have to be very economical but a very little present will make a child happy for a long time, and I like to make them happy when I can. My little girl—a little one about five years old—came over with her mother and recited a Christmas rhyme. This evercame the bashfulness of the rest, and several of them spoke pieces they had learned at the workhouse school, where those who are old enough attend, and the evening seemed to pass very pleasantly, THE WOMEN AND MEN enjoying it as much as the children. Besides this there were about ninety presents given out to the grown people. Each of the women got a knit shawl and a handkerchief and each of the men a useful present. Many of the children have never mown what it is to have a home Christmas; they have been picked up off the streets when babies anging up stockings for Christmas he said: 'Oh, | used always to hang up my stockings and get lots of things until mother and father died, two Christ- | Christmas club. mases ago; but after that Santa Claus wouldn't put anything more in them.' The poor little fellow was told that he could not hand up his stocking, but that he would get something off the Christmas tree, which was just as good." The reporter accompanied Mr. Stoutenberg through all the wards, and was wished a merry Christmas by many of the old men and women who at toasting their feet at the heaters, making them-

One old gray-haired man attracted the reporter's attention particularly. He was seated apart from the rest, his head resting upon his hands, and evidently lost in deep thought. While looking upon his stooping form, his white hair, and careworn and thoughtful face, the reporter fancied he could read his thoughts, running back to the Christmases eve, a group of happy children gathered around the cheerful hearth and watched the sparks flying up the chimney, down which Santa Claus was expected to come after they had all retired. Perhaps he was counting over the changes that each succeeding Christmas had brought upon him; perhaps he was thinking of the one—the first fatal step that had brought about his ruin, and brought him in his old age to seek shelter in an almshouse. As the reporter passed, the old man raised his head and I ooked at him thoughtfully for a second, and then said: "We had a tiptop Christmas dinner to-day; I was just thinking how nice it was. We get plenty to eat here. We had turkey, beef, and ham for dinner, and nuts and raisins, fruit-cake and pie for dessert. I was just sitting here thinking what a nice dinner we had." Then ne impsed into silence again, resuming his thoughtful attitude.

"Look at that; there is they run all the way up to two and three hundred dollars. Yes, I believe the trade is more than double that of last season, though the sale of small, cheap articles has fallen off greatly. A dealer in fancy goods said that his trade-and he thought that of all other dealers in that line of goods-had been much better than usual. His sales, he said, amounted to at least 50 per cent more. The only effect of the bad weather, as far past, perhaps to a happy home where, on Christmas simply want to look at the goods. Those who as he could judge, had been to keep in those who really wanted to buy, he said, came any how, and under no circumstances could he have gotten more customers in his store.

In books, stationery and Christmas cards the sales were reported as large, and while the dealers said they believed that had the weather just before Christmas been better they would have done better, the trade was so much larger than it was last season that they could not complain.

The dry goods merchants did not do as well as some of the other dealers. "Dry goods has no claim on Christmas trade," said the proprietor of one of the large Avenue dry goods houses. dry goods trade is always better after Christmas

"A great deal more than we did last year. We are perfectly satisfied with our Christmas trade." When the owner of a large furniture store was asked about his Christmas trade, he replied: "I haven't looked over my books, but I should judge that it was about 25 per cent less than it was last year. There are 15,000 or 20,000 people in this town who spend all the way from $5 to $25 for Christmas gifts, but next year the elections are held and the $5 and $10 gifts were reduced to toys for $1 or less in anticipation of the drain upon the pocket-book which an election always causes. > A Headless Rooster in Court. THE OWNER OF A WONDERFUL BIRD FINED FOR

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS. Last Monday Major Dye gave a permit to Mr. Randolph Warwick to exhibit a living, headless chicken, at 941 Pennsylvania avenue. Monday night, Mr. M. P. Key, agent for the S. P. C. A., had Warwick, and his companion, Harry Irwin, ar- ton and other places. Consultation free at our rested, and preferred a charge of cruelty to animals against them. In the Police Court, yesterday, Mr. Key took the stand and exhibited the rooster, whose head had been partly chopped off, leaving only the base of the brain. He testified that from his knowledge of animals the chicken was sufferg. Warwick testified that he bought the chicken in Richmoud, Va., about a month ago for $25, from a man who said that the chicken's head had been cut off about twenty months before. He said that he feeds it four or five times a day with a spoon, and that he would not take a $1,000 for it. The court having been informed by Warwick that he charged 10 cents admission to see the rooster imposed a fine of $50 on Warwick, and dismissed Irwin.

JUDGMENT AGAINST THE DEFENDANT RE-AFFIRMED TO-DAY. After the proceedings yesterday Mr. Key, agent for the S. P. C. A., signified his intention of killing the chicken for the purpose of making an examination of the remaining portion of the head, and was notified by Mr. Campbell Carrington that the chicken was valuable, and if killed he would enter a suit | Sold by all druggists.

The case was reopened to-day for the purpose of hearing additional evidence. Dr. Hartigan testified that he made an examination of the chicken, and finds that there is only a portion of the larger brain and the base of the brain left, and, apparently, the chicken is not suffering any pain, and that it shows evidence of being well cared for, and seems to be thriving, and that to kill it would be more cruel than to keep it. The court thought that it was demoralizing, and if this case was dismissed boys would try the experiment every day, and, therefore, gave judgment against the defendant.

CHARGE OF HIGHWAY ROBBERY DISSMISSED .- TOday, in the Police Court, Judge Snell, the case of John Keneilly and Richard Driscoll, charged on the government side with the highway robbery of W. T. Kelly, an employe of the government printing office, and on the District side as suspicious charoffice, and on the District side as suspicious characters, was taken up, and the first charge was tried. Mr. D. E. Cahill appeared for Keneilly and Mr. C. Carrington for Driscoll. Mr. Kelly testified that on Saturday night last, as he was going out H street, near 2d street east, to his home, he was knocked down and robbed of his watch and money, a cloth being thrown over his face. He, however, could not identify his assailants. Mr. Henry Webb, who saw the parties leave Kelly, after he had been who saw the parties leave Kelly, after he had been knocked down, testified that the accused resembled the parties, but he could not be positive. The court dismissed both cases.
